AIM

To design a responsive personal blog webpage using HTML5, CSS3, and Bootstrap 5.

Description

A single-page, responsive blog template containing a navigation bar, a hero banner with a background image, a four-column card grid to display personal stories, and a standard footer.

Algorithm

1. Setup: Initialize the HTML5 document and link the Bootstrap 5 CSS/JS CDNs. Add custom CSS for the hero image and card heights.
2. Navigation: Build a responsive, collapsible <nav> bar using Bootstrap classes.
3. Hero Section: Create a banner section with a dark gradient overlay, a welcome title, and a call-to-action button.
4. Blog Grid: Use Bootstrap's grid system (row g-4, col-lg-3 col-md-6) to create a 4-column layout.
5. Cards: Inside each column, add a .card containing an image, title, and short descriptive text for each blog post.
6. Footer: Add a basic dark footer for copyright text at the bottom.

Program Code:

```
<!DOCTYPE html>
<html lang="en">
<head>
<meta charset="UTF-8">
<meta name="viewport" content="width=device-width, initial-scale=1.0">
<title>My Blog</title>

body{background:#f8f9fa;}
.hero{
background:linear-gradient(rgba(0,0,0,.6),rgba(0,0,0,.6)), url("main.jpg");
background-size:cover;background-position:center;height:400px;color:#fff;
```

display:flex;justify-content:center;align-items:center;text-align:center;}

Our trip from Kothagudem to Vijayawada with friends started with excitement and fun. Midway, our rental car broke down in a small village where there were no repair shops nearby. We even had very little money with us. Thankfully, the car owner took responsibility and arranged help. Despite the difficulties, we stayed positive and finally reached Vijayawada. The journey taught me that confidence and teamwork can overcome unexpected challenges.

Losing my grandmother was one of the hardest moments of my life. It took me almost a year to recover emotionally. Even today, whenever I see a grandmother spending time with her grandson, I remember her and become emotional. This experience taught me to value every moment with our loved ones because memories stay forever.
